I don't know what to do! - From, Upset

* People often do not sign their names when they write for advice.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

Dear Sally,

I need help. I just had a huge argument with my boyfriend! He does not listen to me and that isn't right, is it? Whenever I ask him to help out around the house, he just does not do it. I've been unhappy about it, so I started to complain. He got his coat, said he was not coming back and left! I'm very upset. I have no idea what to do!

Upset

Dear Upset,

First, don't worry. He only took his coat, right? My boyfriend did not want to take out the trash, and he should, right? When I told him it was his turn, he stormed out saying the same thing. He did not want to do any of the chores and that's not fair, is it? He felt that me, the woman, should do everything. We had a long serious talk. I told him that if the relationship wasn't working out we could go our separate ways. If he valued it, we would have to work things out.

I explained that I couldn't work, cook, clean, do laundry, take out the garbage and shop for food. I was not able to do it all alone, was I? He could not expect me to either, could he? We came up with a compromise. This is what you have to do next. Evaluate your situation and make decisions. Otherwise, things will not change, will they?

Learning Points

The Position of Not

When you want to emphasize that something or an action is opposite to what is expected, use not, rather than a contraction in the sentence.

For example:

Otherwise things will not change, will they?

The not shows a firmness on the part of the speaker while still being polite.

When speaking, the not is pronounced louder and longer than it is normally.

Examples:

- He does not listen to me and that isn't right, is it?
- My boyfriend did not want to take out the trash, and he should right?
- I was not able to do it all alone, was I?
- He could not expect me to either, could he?
- Otherwise things will not change, will they?
